Right Honourable Justin Trudeau Prime Minister of Canada 80 Wellington Street Ottawa, ON K1A 0A2

Tuesday, August 30, 2016

Dear Prime Minister Trudeau,

We, the undersigned, are writing to ask you for your help in ending wage discrimination for a large group of women workers at Canada Post. We are asking you to use your influence to ensure that Rural and Suburban Mail Carriers (RSMCs) achieve pay equity with Letter Carriers.

It is 2016, and women and men who do virtually the same work should earn the same wages and enjoy the same benefits. Unfortunately, for a large group of women workers at Canada Post, this is simply not the case.

Pay equity is an established human right enshrined under the Canadian Human Rights Act. This act contains a legal obligation for employers, including Canada Post, to ensure that their employees receive equal pay for work of equal value.

Moreover, in 2004, the Supreme Court of Canada recognized pay equity as being constitutionally protected under section 15 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

Canada also has international human rights' obligations, having ratified a number of international conventions that commit Canada to pay equity.

Despite this, Canada Post is ignoring the law and refusing to pay RSMCs and Letter Carriers equally.

There are over 8,000 RSMCs at Canada Post. They deliver letters and parcels to smaller communities and every province and territory. 70% of these workers are women. The work of RSMCs is virtually identical to the work of Letter Carriers. In spite of this, Letter Carriers earn 28% more than RSMCs and have vastly superior benefits. 68% of Letter Carriers are men. We don't think that this is fair.

In many postal depots, Letter Carriers and RSMCs work side by side. They do the same work processing, and delivering of letters and parcels. But they have different uniforms and RSMCs use their own vehicles in their work. However, these differences do not justify wage and benefit inequality.

The Canadian Union of Postal Workers represents Letter Carriers and RSMCs. Both groups are currently in bargaining and one of the main issues is equality for the RSMC group. Sadly, Canada Post is refusing to budge on this important issue.

Prime Minister Trudeau, you have identified yourself as a feminist, with a belief in gender equality. You have also indicated that your government wants to act on pay equity. It is time to act upon these statements and direct Canada Post – a federal Crown Corporation – to implement the spirit and principles of pay equity.

A recent parliamentary report of the Special Committee on Pay Equity underscores our call with its title, It's time to Act, as well as its contents. The report states, "The Committee recognizes that pay equity is a legislated human right and the Committee believes that the Government of Canada has the obligation to ensure that within its jurisdiction, pay equity is a human right that is promoted, implemented and enforced. The Committee believes it is time for the federal government to act."

We, the undersigned are asking that you address the current injustice at Canada Post by instructing the corporation to bargain in keeping with the spirit and principles of pay equity.

Sincerely,
