

Colleen Moorehead

Corporate Leadership

A true champion for women, Colleen Moorehead is a well-respected business leader, trailblazer and mobilizer. Today she is Chief Client Officer, Osler Hoskin & Harcourt LLP responsible for implementing Osler's client-focused business development strategy. Colleen is also the co-founder of ETRADE Canada.

With extensive experience building successful companies and valuable brands, Colleen has held a number of senior corporate leadership positions and amassed a deep understanding of business development strategy in the financial services, technology, and web-based services sectors.

An accomplished leader, Colleen has supported, mentored and advanced countless women throughout her 30-year career and contributed to meaningful organizational changes for Canadian companies and women in business.

In addition to her role at Osler, Colleen is the co-founder and business director of the Judy Project at the University of Toronto's Joseph L. Rotman School of Management. This initiative is a leadership forum designed to empower and prepare women to take on executive leadership positions. Since its launch in 2003, the Judy Project has supported the ascent of more than 400 women into C-suite positions.

Colleen is also the editor of the best-selling leadership book The Collective Wisdom of High-Performing Women: Leadership Lessons from the Judy Project. The book features personal stories from 70 Canadian women business leaders and highlights their perspectives on the characteristics of great leaders.

As well, Colleen has been recognized and honoured with several awards including the 2021 Trailblazer Award by the Women's College Hospital Foundation, 2015 Catalyst Canada Honours Champion - Business Leader, and the Business Builder 2010 Award by the Canadian Marketing Hall of Legends.

By paving the way for other women and heralding their accomplishments as she goes, Colleen is ensuring the future for women in Canadian business is successful and sustainable.
